Mitchell Then — Williams Now

For the second time in recent American military history a flying officer of high rank has quit the armed forces of the United States in a clash with the "brass hats" over practical aviation policy. Fifteen years ago the late Brig. Gen. William (Billy) Mitchell was suspended for his criticism of the Army and Navy Air Corps. This month Major Al Williams "was allowed to resign" from the Marine Corps Reserve because he wrote newspaper and magazine articles containing criticisms almost identical with those of the late General Mitchell.

CMTC This Year Draws Best Men of Entire History

Reserve Officer Explains 4-Year Training Plan

The Citizens Military Training Corps this year drew to Camp Joseph T. Robinson at Little Rock the highest caliber first-year class in all its history. Lieutenant Royce Weisenberger, told Hope Rotary club Friday noon at Hotel Barlow.

Introduced on a program arranged by Roy Anderson, the reserve officer outlined the arrangement of classes and the membership requirements of the CMTC.

Organized under the National Defense Act some years ago, the CMTC has four classes, as follows:

First Year: These are the original recruits or trainees. They must be at least 17 years old, must stand a physical examination, must have their parents' consent to enter camp, and must present a certificate as to their good character. The 1940 trainee class at Camp Robinson comprised the highest type recruits ever admitted to a first-year class.

The "Reds": This is the second-year class, men who having served a first term with the CMTC have returned for a second 30-day training period the following summer. Most of this class go to the machine-gun company—Company "B".

The "Whites": This is the third-year class, becoming non-commissioned officers.

The "Blues": These are the fourth-year men, they must be between the ages of 19 to 23, and become officers in the Reserve Corps.

CMTC men get no pay, but draw free transportation to and from camp. Unlike the regular army, CMTC is rather liberal in its physical requirements, accepting all men who offer a reasonable chance of improving themselves under military training, the speaker concluded.

A club guest Friday was Clarence Smith, Little Rock Rotarian.

HELD CONFERENCE

Accountant Tells of Pre-Trial Attorneys' Meet

FORT SMITH.—(AP)—The defense in the government's liquor conspiracy trial here drew from a prosecution witness Friday testimony that he had been asked at a pre-trial conference with government representatives "whether he would rather be a witness or a defendant."

The witness, J. S. Garlick, Monroe, La., certified public accountant, said he had been originally named in certain indictments growing out of the investigation of Southwestern Distilled Products, Inc., but the government later dismissed all charges against him.

The government attempted to show through Garlick that an alleged "protection payoff" fund was carried on the books as "travel and entertainment."

Bailey's Son Excused
FORT SMITH, Ark.—(AP)—District Attorney C. R. Barry, prosecuting the government's liquor conspiracy trial here, announced Thursday that Frank Bailey, young son of Gov. Carl E. Bailey who had been subpoenaed as a government witness, would not be asked to testify.

The announcement followed government presentation of two State Revenue Department agents to testify in connection with the governments charge that the department "co-operated" with Southwestern Distilled Products, Inc.'s Sulphur Springs branch by sending a squad, including Frank Bailey, into that section to arrest liquor-runners patronizing Southwestern's competitors in Illinois.

On trial are State Revenue Commissioner Z. M. McCarroll, Deputy Commissioner Butler Toland, Attorney Joe W. Huse and Dave Sherman, Little Rock wholesaler, charged with conspiring with Southwestern to transport liquor to dry states.

Here's How Americans Look at European War Situation Today

Fortune chart above shows how Americans polled answered the question, "If Germany and Italy should win the war, which one of these two things comes closer to what you think the U. S. should do?"

By NEA Service
Fewer Americans believe today we'll get into this war than thought so last January.

The current Fortune Magazine poll reveals this rather startling reversal of opinion.

Asked the question "Do you think the U. S. will get into the war?" the Americans polled for the magazine's August issue replied:

Yes 37.0%
No 44.8%
Yes, if England holds on 2.5%
Yes, if England collapses 4.3%
Don't know 11.4%

Last January 33.1 per cent of those polled by Fortune believed the chance for involvement was better than 50-50.

As shown in the two charts, Americans overwhelmingly favor arming to the teeth against the dictators, but divide on the question of whether we should trade with the new Europe if Hitler wins.

Say We're Helping England Enough
The new poll also shows that the people feel, by conclusive majority, that all is being done for England that ought to be done. To the question, "Do you think we ought to do more?" they answered:

No 57.4%
Don't know 34.2%
Yes 8.4%

Among the 34.2 per cent who believed in more aid for England almost all meant more materials and supplies. Not more than 2.2 per cent favored any sort of direct military aid.

United States opinion, according to this survey, conducted since the fall of France, by no means gives up on Britain. People were asked whether Germany would conquer the British Isles. The replies:

Yes 39.8%
Don't know 37.5%
No 22.7%

Americans think one or both of the allies were to blame for the capitulation of France. Here's how those polled answered the question: "Some are saying the French let the British down and others are saying the British let the French down. What do you think?"

British let the French down 27.8%
French let the British down 13.0%
Let each other down 11.4%
Neither 28.1%
Don't know 19.7%

Determination To Defend Hemisphere Shown
Considerable cynicism as to South America's real desire to keep Germany out of the Western Hemisphere is revealed. A direct question on whether the southern countries are as anxious as we about it resulted as follows:

Yes 48.5%
No 43.5%
Don't know 7.0%

The determination to defend Western Hemisphere lands with arms from armed invasion showed a consistent rise since January, 1939. At that time, only 73.1 per cent of those polled favored such defense of the continent. In January, 1940, it was 74.2 and the current survey raised it to 87.8. Defense of Mexico rose correspondingly from 43 to 76.5 per cent. Brazil from 27.1 per cent to 54.7, the Philippines from 46.3 to 65.5.

Continuation of European Trade With Hitler's New Europe
The determination to defend Western Hemisphere lands with arms from armed invasion showed a consistent rise since January, 1939. At that time, only 73.1 per cent of those polled favored such defense of the continent. In January, 1940, it was 74.2 and the current survey raised it to 87.8. Defense of Mexico rose correspondingly from 43 to 76.5 per cent. Brazil from 27.1 per cent to 54.7, the Philippines from 46.3 to 65.5.

DEVELOP TRADE ONLY WITH COUNTRIES NOT UNDER HITLER'S CONTROL
The determination to defend Western Hemisphere lands with arms from armed invasion showed a consistent rise since January, 1939. At that time, only 73.1 per cent of those polled favored such defense of the continent. In January, 1940, it was 74.2 and the current survey raised it to 87.8. Defense of Mexico rose correspondingly from 43 to 76.5 per cent. Brazil from 27.1 per cent to 54.7, the Philippines from 46.3 to 65.5.

THE "NEW EUROPE"

Germany Begins Outlining Nazi Economic Empire

LONDON.—(AP)—German bombers made a daring thrust at Britain's "back door" Friday by attacking a convoy off the North Irish coast.

Others kept up a continual battle for control of the English Channel by striking again at southeast coastal towns.

Observers heard heavy gunfire and saw flashes of ships' guns as the British replied to the attack on the convoy off the North Irish coast—the first made in this area since the war started.

The British reported shooting down 28 raiders and driving off a fleet of nine German mosquito boats Thursday which attacked a 21-boat convoy just off the mouth of the Thames river.

Her own losses, Britain said, were five small merchant ships totaling 5,104 tons.

In addition to those five other small boats, two destroyers were damaged.

German Trade Conference
BERLIN.—(AP)—Germany set her hand to stabilizing the continent she virtually mastered after a 10-month war, Friday while continuing to send waves of bombers against Britain.

With Rumanian, Bulgarian and Slovak representatives journeying to the Reich between now and Sunday for conferences on the future of southeastern Europe, informed sources disclosed that some 250,000 Poles, still held prisoners of war, will soon be released to contribute labor to Germany's "new Europe."

As for Britain the high command said 23 British planes were shot down Thursday over the British Isles and Germany, and that 63,000 tons of shipping was sunk.

By LOUIS P. LOCHNER
BERLIN.—(AP)—The United States was warned by Adolf Hitler's minister of economics, Walter Funk, Thursday night that she must be prepared to trade with a victorious Germany on Germany's terms after the war or suffer a lockout from the commerce of a whole Europe geared to Nazi economics.

Funk said the United States must give up the idea of forcing her conditions on Germany by a "united front" with the other American nations. If the United States expects to make any use of her gold hoard, Funk said, she must revalue her dollar upward so it can flow out of America and goods flow in.

"When you play marbles and one fellow wins away all the marbles the game ends," he said. "You must then think of some new game. When all the gold is in the United States and it doesn't come out again the world must think of some other medium of exchange."

Picturing a Europe in which all other European countries will devote their production into German needs and exchange largely on the barter system, Funk asserted the reichsmark would be the dominating currency on the continent—a strictly pegged currency. He denied formation of a single monetary or customs union.

TAKE IT EASY
By DR. JOSEPHINE L. RATHBONE

Pains in Body Sign of Excess Muscular Tension

Pain is a common accompaniment of too much tension in muscles. The more intense and sustained the tension, the more intense and sustained the pain. Everything increasing pain increases muscle tension, while everything decreasing muscle tension decreases pain.

Physiologically, these two enemies of comfort—pain and muscle tension or contracture—are almost synonymous. Why, then, is a person not always suffering acutely when he is tense?

Because, psychologically, the "threshold" for perceiving pain varies under different conditions. A psychological threshold is like a barricade. If it is easy for an impression to get from a person's sensory field to his consciousness, we say that the threshold is low. If it is difficult for a sensory impression to be recorded in consciousness, we say that the threshold is high.

Everyone must have experienced this swing in threshold. Is there anyone who has not "forgotten" a headache or a stomachache when a situation has become "thrilling"? Do men and women who can immerse themselves in the hectic and exciting world of affairs not forget the aches and pains that distress them at home?

It is never wise for an individual to raise his threshold for pain when he is tense and in need of relaxation. It is not wise to drive the body so much with excitement that it becomes temporarily insensitive. When any part of the body becomes insensitive from overuse it must be rested.

Athletes have learned the value of resting external muscles when they begin to tighten or cramp. Doctors always prescribe rest or specific relaxing medicines when internal muscles become too tense.

The most common internal muscular symptoms of too much tension are constipation and diarrhea. Constipation comes first, as a rule. Apparently the muscular walls of the stomach and of the intestines become so irritable and tense that they cramp down and interfere with the progress of food and its residues. Only when the irritability becomes extreme does one have diarrhea. Both constipation and diarrhea can result either from "nervousness" or the tension of fatigue, alone.

It seems so foolish for people to dump lemon juice into the stomach to increase acidity, or bicarbonate of soda to counteract the regurgitation of the natural acid because of hyperactivity of the stomach wall, when a good rest and a dose of facing reality and taking oneself less seriously would set matters right.

NEXT: Tense people look well.

In the United States today there are 48,492 communities that are served only by motor vehicles. This represents a population of 7,844,509 persons.

SERIAL STORY FLYING CO-ED

BY MARY KINNAVEY MOORE

COPYRIGHT, 1940,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: The girl at the tavern calls Anne, urges her to warn Dick that Tony plans to tamper with his plane. Tony's partner has talked. Anne rushes to the airport, finds two men working on the plane. As she hurries to call police, Tony sees her, knocks her unconscious.

CHAPTER XI

IT seemed to Anne Norris that she was listening to the boom of a big bass drum. It had a steady, pounding rhythm, and it was loud, ever so loud. Slowly as she struggled up through waves of unconsciousness, she realized that the drum she heard was the terrible pounding in her own head.

She felt sick and dizzy, her head ached. She wondered where she was. Somewhere that was very dark, and very cramped. She was standing up, propped up against a wall. The space was so small that it was almost impossible to move.

She started to call out, realized that a heavy cloth had been fastened in her mouth, forced between her teeth. The waves of faintness flooded over her again. In the next instant, she realized that her hands and her ankles were bound.

There was a flash of incredulous horror, then her mind seemed to clear miraculously. She knew at once what had happened. Tony and his gunman, Jumps Daley, busy at the plane, had heard her trying to slip out of the hangar. One of them had knocked her unconscious with a blow on her head, and she had been bound and gagged and put in—where was she?

As her strength returned, she heard that same low, menacing murmur of voices. Tony's whispers, Daley's muttered answers. She must still be in the hangar. Probably in a small supply closet.

She strained herself to listen to the voices outside.

"How about the dame?"

And Tony answered: "Don't worry about her, she's all right. I've got her tied up. Probably won't come for a while anyway."

Daley's voice demanding again, "How about afterward?"

And there was Tony's reply,

"After this guy takes off, I'll come back and get her. Don't worry, I'll take care of her all right."

Anne Norris felt again that terrible, cold paralysis of fear. After the takeoff—!

THE words broke into her mind like an illuminating light. There was no one to stop Tony Scott now. No one knew of the danger save herself, and Clarice, the tavern girl. Clarice, having warned Anne, would make no further move. Tony Scott and Daley would finish their work unseen and unnoticed.

Dick would return, the plane would be wheeled out and readied, he would take off in the dark, fly five or ten miles perhaps, and then—

And she was here, helpless, unable to move. A sob rose to her throat.

As she stood there, sick with fear, she remembered some advice her uncle, Arnold Dwight, had once given her. "If you're ever in a tight spot, take a long breath, count five and relax. Then think what to do, and do it."

Perhaps there was still a way. She closed her eyes, counted slowly, somehow steadying herself. Then she began trying to move her hands. The ropes that held them were not tight, yet not loose enough for her to free herself. There was a knot that held them. There were a few hooks on the wall behind her, she could feel them against her back. If she could possibly reach them—!

Feeling her way carefully, she worked the knot that held her wrists against one of the hooks fastened in the wall. Slowly, yet surely, she was loosening it. After moments that seemed like hours, she felt it beginning to slip. With a jerk that tore at the skin on her hands, she pulled herself free.

Free! The sense of relief that swept through her was like a sudden, clean wind! Moving swiftly and silently, still fighting back waves of faintness, still trying to ignore the painful throbbing in her head, she removed the gag from her mouth.

Her first impulse was to scream for help, but instantly she checked herself. To scream now would only be to warn Tony and Jumps Daley that she was free.

She untied her ankles, and reached cautiously for the door. It was unlocked! Her captors, believing her to be not only securely bound, but unconscious, had not taken the trouble to lock it.

She turned the knob noiselessly, opened the door inch by inch until at last she was able to step out into the open space of the hangar.

For a moment she stood motionless, listening intently. It was harder to distinguish the voices now, she could only hear their low, muttering. Through the darkness she could see those black, menacing shapes moving about the doomed plane.

They were between her and the door. To would be impossible to slip past them, escape from the hangar and give the alarm.

The only thing to do was to remain there quietly in the shadows until the men had finished their terrible task and left. Then she could go for help, warn Dick. True, Tony and Daley might be out of reach, but they could be found again, and her evidence would convict them.

AS she stood there, congratulating herself on her escape, secure in the knowledge that she would be able to warn Dick in time, she heard a whistle in the distance. It grew nearer and louder. And in the next instant the hangar doors were pushed back and Dick entered.

There was a swift movement near the plane.

A whisper from Daley. "Hey—we're too late—that's him coming now—"

An instant's pause in which the whistling grew louder, nearer, then she heard a muffled oath from Tony Scott.

"There's still a way. Leave things to me."

She drew in a breath to call out, warn Dick of the menace that waited for him in the shadows. He was walking, all unknowing, toward the plane.

"Stick 'em up, Douglas!"

SHE must remain still, if she called out now, Tony or his gunman would shoot, unhesitatingly. She heard Dick's voice, low and incredulous.

"What's going on here?"

As in a nightmare she heard Tony's answer. "You heard me. Put 'em up. That's better. Now—start rolling out this baby and get ready to take off. No funny business now—my friend is going to keep that gun right against your ribs while you're doing it."

That was it! They would force Dick to take off in the damaged plane! Before he knew it, it would be too late. A crash—no evidence. And there was no one who could prevent disaster save herself!

All fears forgotten now, oblivious of personal danger, Anne Norris looked desperately at her for a weapon.

The Kidd Dairy and Ice Softball team of Texarkana will appear here Friday night for the first time this year to play the strong Bruner team.

Robertson, Texarkana's number one pitcher will be in the box for Kidd and Ferguson will pitch for Bruner. Both teams will be in tip top condition and should play a tight game.

Robertson pitched against the Magnolia Oilers last week and shut them out by a score of two to nothing. Ferguson pitched a three hit game against the Magnolia Oilers to defeat them three to two and Friday night the two strongest hurlers will clash against each other to determine who is the best.

Texans to Go to Polls on Saturday

To Nominate Governor and United States Senator

DALLAS, Texas.—(P)—Saturday is election day in Texas. The Democrats will nominate a governor, and five men and a woman have spoken for the job. Texas also nominates one United States senator and 21 representatives. Nomination usually means election.

Gov. W. Lee O'Daniel, the biscuit man of two years ago, is trying for a second term. His opponents, Jerry Sadler, Col. E. O. Thompson, Harry Hines, Arlon B. (Cyclone) Davis and Mrs. Miriam A. (Ma) Ferguson, are determined he will not win in the first primary.

The governor beat 11 opponents in the first election two years ago. O'Daniel has packed them in this month—10,000 at one spot, 12,000 at another. Even crossroads villages have turned out big crowds for his political show.

Senator Tom Connally has two opponents, but he has stuck to business in Washington and let his friends campaign for him. Four former representatives assigned to it by the state," he explained.

Germany's post-war reichsmark, dominating the currency of Europe, will not fluctuate according to the "abandoned principle of free interplay of forces," he said, "and Germany's emergence from the war as the leading power would give her marks a greater value."

He suggested that Germany might abandon one device by making all her marks of the same value instead of differing values now used in foreign trade.

Will Want to Trade
Regarding a German-dominated Europe, Funk said there will continue to be different price levels since different living standards will obtain. Currencies will differ in value, but will be adjusted to Germany's.

Germany expects to employ the same economic policies which made possible "our great economic success before the war" but the bilateral trade arrangements already in effect may be used only as starting arrangements for multilateral systems, with a central clearing house taking care of equalizing balances.

Each country is to develop its own economic resources and conduct trade with other countries, but the principles and methods must on the whole be identical.

Saying "to what extent we conduct trade with the United States depends absolutely upon Americans themselves," he said that as long as "calumny is heaped on German products such trade is of course problematical."

Must Abandon Wrong Method
Referring to United States objection to barter arrangements, he continued: "So long as the United States clings to dogma, which after all is mere dogma and no longer has a foundation in business practice itself, trade with the United States naturally will continue to encounter difficulties."

If the United States "desires to contribute to re-establish continuity in world commerce, they must abandon the wrong method of wanting at the same time to be both the greatest creditor nation and the greatest export country," he declared.

Funk said he did not want gold eliminated as a means of equalizing balances, but was certain it would not play any role as a foundation for European exchange.

"Exchange is not dependent upon its (gold) coverage but upon the value

Famine Is Staring Europeans in Face

French Begging for Food From Victorious Nazis

By the Associated Press
Food shortages were beginning to make themselves felt in Europe Thursday. The shortages may turn to famine if the war goes on. That Europe is beginning to feel the pinch was indicated in reports from various capitals.

Italy's minister of agriculture admitted that, despite Premier Mussolini's annual "battle of wheat" to make Italy as self-sustaining as possible, that crop this year will be 25,000,000 bushels less than last. Poor weather was responsible. Bread rationing was ordered in Italian restaurants, as well as another "meatless day," which makes four weekly.

Short crops have been reported in the Balkans, Europe's great grain producing area when she is on her own.

France, which a few weeks ago joined with Britain in enforcing a food blockade upon Germany, was calling through her newspapers for Germany to give her food. Five or six million refugees from northern France and Belgium have crowded into a distressful burden upon the country.

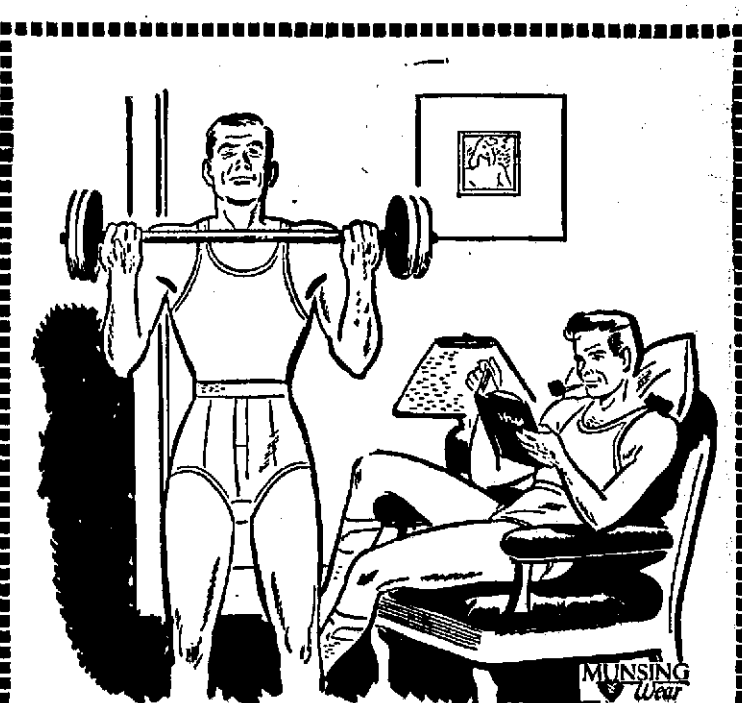

France, never self-sustaining, now is caught in the British blockade. The conserved French press said "the fate of France for months" depends upon German leniency in allowing food supplies to come from occupied France.

Reports from Basel, Switzerland, indicated northern France is not much better off. Even French farmers were reported living off German relief, others going to the Swiss frontier to beg for food.

Beauty Is Helped by 3-Point Plan

Knees, Elbows and Heels Must Be Given Attention

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

There's nothing new about taking a bath to beat the heat, nor anything unusual in trying to look as cool as possible in hot weather. But there are new ways of doing these things—expensive bubble baths and soap-and-water novelties—that help us relax and make our scrubbing easier. Last year more than ten billion cakes of soap were sold in this country. And bath salts are a big item of our cosmetic bill.

There are three special areas that should get special scrubbing in hot weather—knees, elbows and heels. Use your back brush to help stimulate circulation in the knees. If all your scrubbing doesn't make your knees as pink as you'd like them, there are beauty kits now that provide water-proof knee rouge to wear at the beach.

While you're scrubbing you might interpolate this exercise for the back of the knee. It will relax muscles that get tense from high heels. Sit on the floor, legs apart. Hold your left heel with your left hand, then bend your left knee. Balancing yourself by keeping your right hand on the floor, push your left heel up and outward, straightening your leg. Alternate, repeating ten times.

Back to scrubbing: If you're better than blazes when you come home from work, fill the tub a quarter full of cold water. Get in, then turn on the hot water, letting the tub warm up gradually. You'll feel cooler when you get out than you would have if you'd taken a cold bath. Rest about 20 minutes with your head against the bath mat on the back of the tub, then reach for the brushes. The back brush can do not only for back and knees but for heels, too. The brushes should be sudsy with soap. That gives you two weapons against the oils and salts that summer perspiration deposits on your skin.

If your feet ache, give them a special treat by dissolving a generous quantity of baking soda (at least a large tablespoon to a quart of water) in your foot bath. For extra relaxation, bathe your feet in the wash basin. Lifting them that high rests them on the same principle that functions when a man props his feet on his desk.

Big Gun for Industry

Not a giant among cannons, but ammunition for industrial defense. This huge 130,000-pound shaft, pictured in General Electric's Schenectady, N. Y., plant, will help build one of the 75,000-horsepower generators which will turn waters stored behind the government-built Bonneville, Ore., dam into electricity for industrial production.

HARRISON IN HOLLYWOOD

By PAUL HARRISON, NEA Service Correspondent

'Who's the Director?' Not 'Who's the Star?' May Be Movie Patrons' Next Question

HOLLYWOOD—The time may come when movie patrons, saying, "What shall we see tonight?" will be influenced as much by the names of directors as by the stars.

Right now, Cecil Blount DeMille is the only director whose name has important box-office value. The veteran showman has publicized himself until he personifies the temperance and ostentation and almightiness of Hollywood itself. Frank Capra's name is attractive to fewer but more discerning millions who are beginning to think of it as a standard of dramatic integrity. John Ford has staunch fans. So do Ernst Lubitsch, Leo McCarey, and a few others who have become practically independent.

The movies have scores of hack directors who at best are capable of transcribing a detailed script to celluloid without contributing anything to it. Then there's a large group of directors, many of them busy and well paid, who have everything needed for top-notch success except the courage to fight and maybe get fired for their artistic convictions.

Garson Kanin brought Hollywood to its feet with "A Man to Remember" and "The Great Man Votes," a couple of Bs which were as excellent as they were economical. When his studio tried to boost him to higher-budgeted but routine assignments, he declared he was not going to direct any glittering trash. He accepted suspension and idleness until the studio finally gave in. Kanin, still only 28, today is considered by Hollywood to be one of the two or three most important creative directors.

Kanin Makes Haste Slowly

Here's an example of his unconventional thinking which may prove valuable to the whole industry: Kanin now is directing Carole Lombard and Charles Laughton in "They Knew What They Wanted." During the first 10 days, not a camera turned. Most of the time the cast just sat around a big room and read the script for a few days, then the players rehearsed on improvised sets. By this time they knew every line and action. More important, they had developed a feeling for the story as a whole. When filming began, they didn't have to rehearse each scene until they were sick of it.

The scheme seems to have provided extra vitality. But of more measurable benefit to the studio is the fact that, counting the 10 days of rehearsals, the production already is well ahead of schedule.

Another Corner

Hollywood is watching another young director. Most of the people at Warners say that Vincent Sherman will be great if he can keep on adding freshness to familiar material as he did with "Saturday's Children."

Sherman is 34 and handsome enough to be a leading man. He was, in fact, an actor with a lot of New York stage experience. But he had the bad luck to bow into pictures with a tough-guy role. After six such parts he fled to Broadway, where he still is. If Warners hadn't surprised him with an offer of a writing job. After scribbling a few scripts for B pictures, he was startled again by being given a directorship.

The studio may have had an exaggerated notion of his writing and directing experience for the stage. All he'd done in those lines was revise and direct "It Can't Happen Here" for a Federal Theater quickie. It was not a very good play, and he knew it. "The most I could do," Sherman said, "was raise it to the dignity of being panned seriously."

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Weighing the Consequences Always
A Principle of Temperate Living
Text. Proverbs 17-18; Isaiah 5:11, 12
18-23; Galatians 6:7-9

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

Wisdom has always stressed the foolishness of sinful and easy living, in contrast with the substantial gain of righteousness and the well-disciplined life.

Wisdom is not the opinion merely of philosophers who have thought a great deal about life and human conduct. More deeply, it is the voice of experience, the well-considered judgment of those who derive their counsel from life itself. They have observed what happens—the types of conduct that make for unrest and disorder and unhappiness, even when sometimes they seem to offer immediate advantage or gain.

The counsels of wisdom are based not upon a few temporary happenings or the experiences of a few lives. Their basis is found rather in long-range judgment concerning groups and nations as well as individuals, and developed out of observations that extend over along enough time and over a wide enough area to make the judgments of eternity manifest as well as the judgments of time. It is these judgments of time and eternity that men rightly call the judgments of God.

Here in our lesson, drawn from three sources, the Scriptures, the philosopher, writing in the Book of Proverbs, observes that "the fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom." It is in listening to sound instruction that young men take the right course in life, and it is in listening to allurement of evil that they take the first step in the way that leads to destruction.

The allurement of intoxicants and music, and of the things that might be pleasant enough in themselves, is not sufficient to obscure the nature and effect of the wrong choice. The prophet, writing in the Book of Isaiah, strongly enforces this counsel of wisdom. Nothing is changed by calling evil "good," or by surrounding dark and evil ways with an appearance of light, and by sugar-coating bitter pills with sweetness. The eternal difference between right and wrong cannot be glossed over.

Paul, in his Epistle to the Galatians, clinches all this very strongly in his warning to men that they be not deceived. "God is not mocked," he says, "for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." Is there anything that he also reaps? Is there anything that he also reaps in human life and in history more thoroughly than these words of Paul?

But let us not fail to note that our lesson ends on a great note of optimism. The law that what a man sows he also reaps, applies to the things

The world never more sadly needed than at present a great sowing of good deeds and kind thoughts of justice, tolerance and goodwill. What hope can there be if the sowing be only of violence, and hate, and greed, and lust of power?

More Maugham Short Stories And Warning

All W. Somerset Maugham asks of his new volume of short stories is that the reader be "amused, interested and moved." Mr. Maugham has succeeded beyond his hopes. You'll finish the last story of his "The Mixture as Before" (Doubleday Doran: $2.50) with sincere regret. And with each story you'll find full measure of amusement and interest.

Maugham begins with a gay account of "The Three Fat Women of Antibes," three ponderous creatures who stage a grand "bender" of starches and sugars after vain efforts to keep the bathroom scales from breaking.

It's a long jump from the Riviera to the French penal colony of St. Laurent, but Maugham achieves it easily in giving you the story of "A Man With a Conscience"—an unusual twist to the ordinary account of two men and a girl, and what happens after she marries one of them.

"The Lotus Eater" should appeal to all because the hero does what most of us would like to do—chuck the commonplace, everyday routine and spend the rest of life in sunshine and happiness. But all happiness has a price, a fact which is treated differently in "An Official Position."

Saving one of the best for the last, Maugham concludes with "The Facts of Life," in which a young tennis player proves, to his own satisfaction, at least, that the laws his father has laid down for correct living admit exceptions. It's a light yarn and gives the collection a grand, final laugh.

One part of the author's introduction is disturbing: "I have now written between 80 and 90 stories. I shall not write any more." If Mr. Maugham keeps his word, he will be depriving his faithful readers of sincere enjoyment. He should yield to the demand for "More Maugham."

It is reported that 88 per cent of the trucks registered during 1939, were privately owned, and that the largest single group of truck owners were farmers.

All models and types of Chevrolet trucks may still be purchased at today's low price levels, so it would be wise to consider replacing some of your trucking equipment with new Chevrolets now.

TRUCK BUYERS DEMAND FACTS— Chevrolet Gives Certified Proof

In order to provide conclusive proof of the dependability, economy, and value of Chevrolet trucks, Chevrolet recently sponsored a test run of a stock Chevrolet truck which was the longest test run ever conducted under the supervision of the American Automobile Association.
